Neal Gerber Eisenberg COO Sonia Menon Featured in The Huffington Post

Sonia Menon, chief operating officer of Neal, Gerber & Eisenberg LLP, was featured in the “Women in Business Q&A” blog on The Huffington Post, published June 22, 2016.

In the article, Sonia discusses her background and the experiences that helped her become a leader at the firm, and offered advice to women in leadership positions. She also discussed her thoughts on the future of Neal Gerber Eisenberg, currently celebrating its 30th anniversary year.

“Reflecting on what this milestone means to me,” she said, “I am reminded of the core values on which our firm was founded – our steadfast commitment to being true business partners with our clients, retaining the brightest legal talent, our culture of teamwork, and the importance of cultivating long-lasting relationships that are based on integrity and respect.”

Sonia noted that the firm is also undergoing a change in leadership this year, as Scott J. Fisher assumed the role of managing partner – just the second managing partner in the firm’s history. This change, she said, presents an opportunity for the firm “to continue to evolve to stay relevant to our changing client and employee population.”
